Tohkoh Jushi

Tohkoh Jushi offers scholarships to personally funded students from abroad via the public interest incorporated foundation Japan Educational Exchanges and Services. Intended for students majoring in environmental and recycling issues, the scholarship contributes to the development of human resources possessing advanced specialized knowledge, by mitigating financial insecurities and allowing students to concentrate on their studies.

Fujichemi Kinki

Tenjinsai is considered one of Japan's three major festivals and a representative festival of Osaka boasting a history of more than 1000 years. The festival is held mainly at Tenmangu Shrine near today's Tenmanbashi, where Fujichemi Kinki's office has been located since it was founded as Kansai Fujikura Paint some 50 years ago. With thoughts of gratitude to the local community and contribution to the traditional festival, Fujichemi Kinki has continued to donate money to the Tenjinsai every year. The Funatogyo boat procession along the Okawa River that flows in front of the company and the votive fireworks that are released into the sky above the city are magnificent sights.
